EDITOR'S PAGE
"CLAIRE'S CORNER"

Dear Kinsmen:

How enthusiastic was our little group that met in Auburn in August 1963!
Most of us had a genealogical problem and those who didn't were interested in tying together the branches of the Family Tree and learning more of our earlier progenitors.

It sounded so easy to make plans for incorporation and then publishing a Quarterly devoted to the KIMBRO-KIMBROUGH genealogy. The first issue was planned for January 1964 and, by the time it reaches you, the third issue should be almost ready for distribution. Perhaps we were too enthusiastic or too uninitiated in the many details of the work involved. However, four issues will be sent to each subscriber bearing a 1964 date. It is hoped that, as we become more familiar with the tasks involved, we will more nearly be in position to meet our proposed publication dates. Please be patient with us--we are all busy people and serving voluntarily, without pay, because we do feel this to be such a worthwhile project. Each member of the "family" is cordially invited to join the Association and to submit to the Editor any pertinent data you may have on Kimbro or Kimbrough genealogy. Items of current events are also solicited and will be printed without charge. If possible, send not only your own membership fee but subscribe for your children or interested relatives. All officers are devoting much time and effort to the Quarterly and we are urgently in need of volunteer workers to obtain courthouse records of Kimbrough marriages, deeds, census records, etc. Not to be overlooked are records of "Minutes of the Orphans Court" for these show minor children and are invaluable in those instances where a will was not of record. We want your membership and we need you help to increase the value of the Quarterly.

In our effort to get this first edition into your hands, many good editorial policies may have been overlooked. Remember, we are not professionals in this field--just ordinary people with a devoted interest in our family history. I have read that a good editor will leave much room for improvement in the first issues; if this be so, then I should qualify! Much material has come into my hands and perhaps I did not choose too wisely as to factual data given in this issue. I do not think any of you will complain about the article on Colonist John Kimbrough and more is promised by its author. Your constructive criticism and suggestions for improvement will be greatly appreciated. LET US HEAR FROM YOU!

In case any of you is not particularly interested in your ancestors, I would like to borrow a quotation from Sir Winston Churchill: "We cannot say the past is past without surrendering the future." To this, I would add that we, too, will one day be gone and it is up to us to leave the record for those who follow so that we will not be just a "past that is past", leaving no sign that we have been here.

Kindredly yours,
/s/ Claire Kimbrough Bryant

COLONIST JOHN KIMBROUGH

The fairly uniform spelling of names today does little to prepare one for the time when this was not the case. Bi-names and tri-names are of relative recent origin. There was even a time when a person acquired a name some years after birth. The name would be characteristic of some physical, mental or behavior pattern of the individual, or based upon some deed, or action of valor.

William the Conqueror felt a need to know what he possessed after he had defeated Harold for the possession of England. What is today known as the Domesday (or Domesday) Book was the inventory William took of England. This inventory pointed up the need for bi-names and thus arose such designations as "John the Silversmith", "Robert the Wainright", or "Robert of the Leah".

Spelling of surnames began to be stabilized shortly before 1700. The spelling of our surname, Kimbrough, began to be stabilized about 1750 but has since become or continued varied. At least six spelling variations of my father's name are found in Civil War records, but in the records he signed the spelling was "Kimbrough". A first cousin in Florida, whom I have never met, relates in a letter that her father told her many times that all who spell their name K-I-M-B-R-O-U-G-H are related.

The name Kimbrough seems to be unique. Plaintive cries are found in historical magazines by previous researchers about the origin of the name Kimbrough and the numerous Kimbrough men in the Revolutionary War. My own researches of foreign telephone directories show no evidence of the name Kimbrough in any country other than the United States and Canada. C. R. Humphrey-Smith, Esq., a noted genealogist of England, was completely unfamiliar with the name until I wrote him. Black's book on Scottish surnames does not list the name Kimbrough or its possible origin.

Elsdon C. Smith, in his book on the Origin of American Surnames, equates Kimbrough with Kineburh, meaning "Royal Stronghold". Correspondence with Mr. Smith reveals he had no specific data on which to base his conclusion other than etymology and correspondence with member of name societies and that it seemed to be correct. Mr. T. C. Kinniburgh (pronounced Kinibrew) has spent forty years researching his family and, thinking there might be a connection between his family name and ours, took numerous notes on the American Kimbroughs. He found no connection between the two names. In reply to my letter, he made specific mention of the "Kimbroughs of America". This takes on added importance after we learn he has found members of his family in South Africa, United States, Canada, Australia and South America.

Friends who have relatives in the British Isles have had those relatives search for the name there to no avail. While in England, the Very Reverend Conrad Lewis Kimbrough searched telephone directories for the name Kimbrough with a negative result. From this, it appears Colonist John Kimbrough coined a name for himself and his descendants, or the name became altered beyond current recognition by the language and educational difficulties experienced during the colonial days.

Legends of a family have a way of being distorted and possibly invented. The legend that our Colonist Ancestor, whose name became John Kimbrough, arrived in the Colonies about 1666 with a wife Mary, said to have been a Douglas(s), and children John, Jr., Marmaduke and Jane, in the company of a Robert Douglas(s), seems to have a chance of being correct. Thanks to some twenty-five or more lawsuits, we find a John Kimbrough (various spellings) in Maryland from 1667 to 1676. His first found appearance in court is as a witness involving payment for nursing and possibly medication rendered by one Goody Dod or Dode, wife of a Richard Dod. His testimony reveals he did some type of work for Robert Clearke (Clark), Surveyor General of the Dominion of Maryland.¹ Later testimony reveals Colonist John Kimbrough helped Robert Clearke survey a parcel of land, but there is no indication of the nature of the assistance rendered. Estimates of his age recorded in two different court proceedings, when serving as a juror, indicate he was born sometime between 1640 and 1647.

Thanks to the generosity, or conniving, of one Joseph Calley, described as late of New England, we find a record of a Mary Kimbrough. In 1672 Joseph Calley executed a deed of gift naming a Mary Kimbrough recipient of one filly colt.² The filly colt was not Joseph Calley's to give, as unsatisfied legal instruments were held on the colt and its mother by another person.³ It seems reasonable to assume that Mary Kimbrough, the intended recipient of the filly colt, was a child. Such a gift to the wife of another man seems a little out of place and may have resulted in a feud with no need for this report, or there would have been better records on which to base this report.

Colonist John Kimbrough is first found in the area of Port Tobacco, Maryland, a thriving and promising port of that day, but the name "village" would flatter it today. He is later found at St. Maries (Mary's).⁴ He apparently left Port Tobacco prior to 1673 as there is found a land transfer of that date stating the land was formerly held by John Kimberely. No records have been found to show Kimberely is a variant spelling of Kimbrough, but the absence of records to the contrary and the scarcity of population leads to this belief. St. Maries became the seat of government of the Dominion of Maryland and Colonist John Kimbrough lived in that area for a few years. That he was a man of substance is indicated by his suing for the recovery of a loan of a fair quantity of tobacco.⁵ In addition, he sat on juries in the presence of members of the Calvert family, the Lord Baltimores.⁴ Sometime in 1676 he left Maryland and his suit against Pope Alvey, which had been continued for the third time, was dismissed on 20 May 1676.⁶

We next find Colonist John Kimbrough in New Kent County, Virginia, in the same year (1676)⁷ and later in 1678, petitioning the House of Burgesses of Virginia for a pension by reason of a lameness. He is again petitioning for a pension in 1680 and is granted a pension of 1,000 pounds of tobacco and cask yearly for the remainder of his natural life.⁸ There are a number of records showing he collected the pension until 1714. Colonist John Kimbrough settled in New Kent County, Virginia, in the area in which Colonel Nathaniel Bacon (of the Bacon Rebellion) caused great damage to property.

In those days all able-bodied men were subject to call by the militia. There is no definite proof but it is reasonable to assume Colonist John Kimbrough incurred his lameness while serving in the militia against the depredations of Colonel Nathaniel Bacon. Colonel Nathaniel Bacon, late of England and anxious to show his mettle, and a force of men from the frontier appeared at Jamestown before Governor Berkeley and the assembled Burgesses, demanding a commission to lead a force against the Indians who were harassing the frontiers. The manner in which Colonel Nathaniel Bacon received his commission and the vigorous manner in which he operated against the Indians aroused the ire of Governor Berkeley. Bacon was reprimanded and he started on a campaign of revenge in an area where a number of his relatives lived, including another Colonel Nathaniel Bacon. The frame church of the area, as well as Jamestown, is said to have been burned by Colonel Bacon. The Colony of Virginia paid for much property damage Bacon inflicted and granted a number of pensions for personal body injuries suffered during the period of difficulty. On the third of August 1676 Governor Berkeley met Colonel Bacon with a show of force. Colonel Bacon was injured and fled to the home of a physician where he died. He was buried secretly. Public opinion during this period fluctuated from time to time from Berkeley to Bacon and from Bacon to Berkeley. Another church is not known to have been built in the area until after 1700 when the brick St. Peter's Church was built. The Church of England was the dominant faith of this area of Virginia at that time and the Vestry of the Church performed a number of governmental functions, such as the processioning of the lands, orders for surveys, taxing and others. Thus, any early land records of the early emigrant Kimbrough family in Virginia were destroyed. St. Peter's Church was gutted of its furniture and used as a stable during the Civil War.

Trenches were dug across the adjoining graveyard and the headstones were damaged or destroyed. Incomplete records of the Vestry of St. Peter's have since been found and published. Only tantalizing records of the Kimbroughs are found in the published incomplete records. About 1730 a number of names of Kimbroughs, with no indication of their parentage, appear in the surviving Vestry records of St. Peter's Church. There is nothing to indicate the exact location in which Colonist John Kimbrough and his family settled upon arriving in New Kent County, Virginia. We do find a court order of 1699 restricting the encroachment of white settlers to a distance of three miles from the village of the Pamunkey Indians. In this court order specific mention is made of 1500 acres of land held jointly in the names of John Kimbrough, William Winston and John Longworthy. Their title was ruled valid inasmuch as the quit rents had been paid regularly since 1685. John Longworthy was deceased and without heirs and his holdings were divided between Colonist John Kimbrough and William Winston. This was somewhere near the Pamunkey River in an area known as the Pamunkey Neck.

In 1687 Colonist John Kimbrough was granted a patent for 475 acres for paying the passage of nine persons (possibly two or three more) to the Colony of Virginia. Two of the passengers were Colonist John Kimbrough and a Mary Kimbrough.⁹ They were returning to the Colonies after a visit to the homeland and had paid the passage of former neighbors or their children to the Colonies and thus acquired more land. This was more affluence than a pensioner should show, and in 1688 it was referred and recommended to a committee of the Virginia House of Burgesses that his pension be discontinued unless granted for life "for John Kimbrough is very well able to maintain himself".¹⁰ Continued payment of his pension was confirmed in 1690 and continued to be paid him until near the time of his death, which occurred sometime between December 1715 and 3 April 1716 when reference is made to "Widow Kimbrough" in the orders for the processioning of the lands.¹¹

Shortly after, or while, the brick St. Peter's Church was still under construction, Colonist John Kimbrough was spokesman for a committee of men petitioning for the construction of a chapel in their area of the parish because of their remoteness from church. After the petition was approved by the Vestry of St. Peter's Church, Colonist John Kimbrough made known his intention to donate two acres of land, all manners of timber and a spring toward the construction of the chapel which became known as St. Paul's Church.¹² John Kimbrough, Jr. was the contractor for its construction. Services were held in Colonist John Kimbroughs home while St. Paul's was being built. The tobacco payments Colonist John Kimbrough received for the use of his home for services indicate it was about 18 to 20 months before St. Paul's was ready for use.

St. Paul's was destroyed by the British during the Revolutionary War and there is nothing to indicate where the church once stood. Colonist John Kimbrough sold his plantation to St. Paul's as a glebe for the church.¹³ He received 15,000 pounds of tobacco paid in three equal yearly installments. Nothing has been found to indicate where he lived after the sale of his plantation. At a later date damaged and incomplete Vestry records of St. Paul's were found and published. Identification of the Kimbroughs mentioned in the surviving Vestry records of St. Paul's is incomplete.

A closer examination of history gives some idea why our Colonist ancestor left Maryland for Virginia after apparently being well established in Maryland. His church activities in Virginia show he was a member of the Church of England which was fairly well established in Virginia at an early date. There were many religious sects in Maryland and the differences between the various religious sects in Maryland in 1676 were rapidly reaching an explosive point. In fact, the Bacon Rebellion in Virginia was the fuse that ignited a religious rebellion in Maryland. It is interesting to note that Colonist John Kimbrough's efforts to avoid a probable religious rebellion in Maryland brought him in almost immediate contact with a rebellion of another nature in Virginia.

PROFESSOR FELIX A. KIMBROUGH, AUTHOR OF "COLONIST JOHN KIMBROUGH"

Professor Felix A. Kimbrough, who has done much research on the earlier members of the Kimbrough family, has contributed the article on our immigrant ancestor, John Kimbrough. He has chosen to designate this John as "Colonist John Kimbrough" to distinguish him from his son John and other descendants bearing the name. Incidentally, Professor Kimbrough has sufficient material on hand to continue this article for at least four issues of the Quarterly. (Your editor confesses at this point it is I who have chosen to call the author "Professor".

He is far too modest to do so but he was first referred to me by this title and it is one I have found to be very apropos.)

To give you something of the author's background, Professor Kimbrough has furnished us the following information:

"An element of doubt relative to the ancestry of my great-grandfather, Rev. Duke Kimbrough of East Tennessee, in the "History of the Carlock Family and Adventures of Pioneer American Families", by Marion Pomeroy Carlock, sparked my interest in Kimbrough Genealogy on 17 August 1957. No one by the name of Kimbrough, other than brothers and sisters, had been known to me prior to the age of 22. This may seem strange to many, but my age was less than five when my father, Felix Grundy Kimbrough, died and my grandfather Kimbrough and all his children, except one, had migrated from East Tennessee by 1867 and settled in Washington County, Arkansas, near the Arkansas-Indian Territory boundary.

"Fortune was smiling as my sister Ethel Kimbrough, deceased, of Monrovia, Cal., had recently published a genealogy of our grandfather, 'Thomas Kimbrough and His Descendants', and had made mention of great-grandfather Duke Kimbrough and his parents, Bradley and Sarah Thompson Kimbrough of Rowan County, N. C. Here the trail vanished and my curiosity was further stimulated. Research vaguely indicated the Kimbroughs had first settled in Virginia. Vague comment was found to the effect that the Kimbrough ancestry extended to the earliest times in the Colonies and mention was made of the 'starving time' which indicated Jamestown. Through grandmother lines, it has been established the ancestry of many Kimbroughs does extend to Jamestown and the year 1608.

"In tracing the family, further complicated by disparity in age with my half brothers and sisters, periods of family silence during the Civil War, and interstate migration of my Confederate Veteran, school teacher and merchant father, I paid much attention to the processioning of land and migration and genealogy of Kimbrough neighbors where I gained clues and data on my own family whose early records were in the destroyed-record area of New Kent County, Va. (Four instances of destruction: Frame church destroyed by Nathaniel Bacon of Bacon's Rebellion; St. Peter's church gutted of furnishings and used as stable during Civil War; St. Paul's Church destroyed during Revolution, and the New Kent County frame courthouse which burned.)

"I was born 15 Nov. 1900 at Dutch Mills, Washington County, Ark., not more than two miles from the Arkansas-Indian Territory boundary. My father, Felix Grundy Kimbrough, was born in 1842 in East Tennessee. He served four years in the Confederate States Army and surrendered at Appomattox Courthouse

9 April 1865. His given name was the full name of the Attorney General of the United States for the years 1836-1840, whom his father admired. My mother was Elizabeth Hodges whose father, Albert Jesse Hodges of Denton County, Texas, joined the Creek First Mounted Rifles at beginning of war and took part in the Battle of Pea Ridge, Ark., and was captured in the battle of Cabin Creek in Indian Territory. He was held prisoner at Fort Morton, Indiana, for two years and was an exchange prisoner for hospitalization in Virginia about ten days before the end of the war. Hospitalization did not materialize and he was two years recuperating and working his way back to his family in Texas.

"Destruction of records in Virginia, by wars, makes research on the Kimbrough and many other families rather difficult, but progress is being made and some Kimbrough lines are known to the immigrant ancestor, Colonist John Kimbrough.

"Research and correspondence with others bearing the name Kimbrough and other surnames, shows much accumulated information on the family. Some Kimbrough genealogies have been published and a fairly large number of manuscripts have been prepared but few show ancestry beyond 1750-1800. In too many instances researched material has passed on with the researchers.

"Early enthusiasm prompted me with the ambition of publishing a Kimbrough Genealogy. This was before it was found the family is very numerous. If a Kimbrough Genealogy is ever published, it will require the cooperation of many people over a fair length of time. The story of the Kimbro-Kimbrough family is interesting and needs to be told. If members of the family and the daughter lines do not tell the story, it will never be told.

"My immediate desire, to help in my research, is a copy of 'The Kimbrough Family', published by Joel Munsell Sons, listed in 'Books in Print' in 1928. Does anyone know where a copy of this publication can be obtained?"

.....Concerning personal data, Professor Kimbrough writes: "I graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1924 with a B.A. degree majoring in chemistry and minoring in mathematics, physics, biology and history. Taught at Augusta, Arkansas, 1924-25 and at Alexandria, Louisiana, 1925-27. Estimating and Equipment Engineer with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in Oklahoma City for six years beginning in July 1927. Struggled during the depression like many others and returned to teaching in Oklahoma City about 1941. During the war years and later, worked the prescription case of a busy drugstore about 15 years--nights and weekends--in addition to teaching. Presently am Chairman of the Mathematics Department in the school where I teach in Oklahoma City. Hold a life-time certificate from the State Department of Education of Oklahoma to teach chemistry, physics, mathematics and biology. Married Elizabeth Margaret Leonard of Kansas City in 1931 and have two sons, John born in 1935 and Joseph born in 1939. Both born in Kansas City Missouri."

GENEALOGICAL CHART

Included with this issue (I hope) is a blank genealogical chart for the use of each subscriber in listing his/her Kimbrough ancestry. It is believed the form is self-explanatory (the individual submitting the chart would be #1, his father #2, mother #3.) It is the hope of your officers that, even though you have submitted portions of your lineage in letter form, that you will take the time to submit it by chart.

Please include your Kimbrough lineage as far back as you have it. Also, on the reverse side of the form (or on an attached sheet), give the children of each generation. This is most important in completing the Kimbrough genealogy for sometimes another's ancestor can be found through the names of brothers, sisters, etc. Our family was such a prolific one and its use of the same Christian name by so many of the earlier branches makes a difficult problem of locating the parentage of some of our progenitors. Therefore, if you will cooperate in submitting not only your immediate lineage, but in listing the issue of each generation--as known by you-- it will be of untold benefit to the Association.

Please give source (proof) of your data.

The "I hope" used in the first paragraph above is given for this reason: Cutting of these first stencils has fallen upon the shoulders of your editor who admits to being some twenty years out of date at such a job. The stencil for the chart has been done by stylus and it is not known if this will produce the desired number of copies. If not, your chart has not been omitted due to oversight but because it could not be reproduced satisfactorily in this manner; should this be the case, the form will be reproduced in another way and will be included in the next issue.

In future editions of the Quarterly, we will include, from time to time, genealogical charts of the Association's officers and other members who submit charts containing sufficient information to be of help to others. We are willing to share with you our known data--please share yours with us.

Q U E R I E S

1. Clyde H. Kimbrough, 449 Brookwood Drive, Auburn, Ala., wants to know the name of parents of THOMAS WINFIELD KIMBROUGH, b. 1822 and ASBURY MORGAN KIMBROUGH, b 1826. The census indicates both were born in Georgia. It is known they came to Tallapoosa County, Ala., in the early 1840's. It is believed that their parents came from Greene or Putnum counties into Harris or some adjoining county in Ga. prior to coming to Ala.

2. Mrs. P. A. Bryant (nee: Claire H. Kimbrough), P. O. Box 691, Bay Minette, Ala., wants any known data on parents of JAMES KIMBROUGH, b. 13 Nov. 1789 in N. C., d. 14 Dec. 1863 in Ala., married 19 July 1819 to LUCY THREADGILL who was b. 19 Oct. 1790/91 N. C., d. 26 April 1853, Marengo Co., Ala. JAMES probably had brothers named NATHANIEL, JOHN, HENRY and MARMADUKE. His father was probably named JOHN KIMBROUGH and his mother may have been Mary (if so, what was her maiden name?) or was JAMES the son of JOHN and AMY ALSTON KIMBROUGH as many think? John Kimbrough who married Amy Alston was born about 1769 and his wife in 1775. This would have made Amy Alston only 14 at time of birth of James and it is doubtful that he was the first child as his name has never been listed first in the several lists that I have seen. Also, Amy Alston is sometimes referred to as the "Widow Pickett" and, if so, this lends considerable doubt as to her having been the mother of James Kimbrough, b. 1789. James Kimbrough was prob. born in Anson Co., N. C. He is known to have been in Wilcox Co., Ala., in 1830 when his son Marmaduke was born.

Issue of JAMES KIMBROUGH and LUCY THREADGILL:

George Washington b. 3 Aug. 1820

John b. 19 Oct. 1821 (Is this the John who m. Mary P. Stokes?)

Thomas T. b. 23 Dec. 1822

Nathaniel A. b. 15 Dec. 1824

Mary Jane b. 10 May 1826, m. V. W. Wright 2 Feb. 1843

James b. 20 Feb. 1828

Marmaduke b. 29 Mar. 1830, m. (1st) Martha Jane Lewis

(lic. issued 30 Jan 1852, m. 3 Feb. 1852)

m. (2nd) Martha Jane Griffith

William T. b. 30 Oct. 1832, m. 4 June 1856 Relevia C. Easterling

A great deal of time and money has been spent trying to prove, beyond doubt, the parentage of JAMES KIMBROUGH who married LUCY THREADGILL. Any data furnished will be greatly appreciated and will be shared with descendants of the above-listed children. Also, want PROOF of James' brothers.
